THE TWINKL TIMES

MEN ON THE MOON!

It's One Giant Leap...

21st July 1969

NASA astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin became the first humans to walk on the Moon yesterday.

They travelled into space in the Saturn V rocket with Michael Collins and reached the orbit of the Moon on 19th July 1969. Yesterday, Michael stayed in the rocket doing experiments and taking photographs of the mission. Neil and Buzz entered the lunar module, which was nicknamed The Eagle.

The Eagle (lunar module)

Neil and Buzz's job was to reach the Moon. The Eagle was heading towards a large crater but Neil took control and landed in a safe position.

They had a rest before Neil left The Eagle. He went down the metal stairs slowly. As he reached his left foot down to touch the Moon's dusty surface, he said, "That's one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind."

Neil Armstrong

Buzz joined Neil and they spent around two and a half hours exploring the Moon. Around 600 million lucky television viewers around the world watched them. They collected some Moon dust and rock. They also planted the American flag on the Moon. At first, this task did not go as planned but Neil and Buzz managed to place the flag so that it could be clearly seen.

The astronauts enjoyed moving around the Moon's surface. They jumped like kangaroos and leapt like gazelles! Neil said that it was not at all difficult to move around in low gravity.

THE TWINKL TIMES

MEN ON THE MOON!

When they re-entered the lunar module, their bulky spacesuits snapped off a switch. They fixed this using part of a pen before heading back to Michael in the rocket.

These astronauts made history and will be remembered forever for being the first men on the Moon.
